

Ice Breaker/Energiser/Intergrater

Name: Odd or even

Number of Participants: 10+

Equipment: Paper

Time: 10 - 15 mins

Steps:

1. Roll up small pieces of paper to make them into little balls. Give each participant 10 paper balls each
2. Each participant will need to place a number chosen by them of small balls into their right hand holding them in a clenched fist. This should be done discretely.
3. The participants then approach each other with the first person saying 'I am (name), odd or even'. The other participant will guess whether the participant who asked the question has an odd or even number of balls in their clenched fist.
4. If they guess correctly they can take one of the small balls of paper from the other participant.
5. Roles are then reversed and the same procedure takes place. Once they have both taken their turn to ask the question they move on to someone else.
6. The game continues until someone has no small paper balls left or you feel that enough time has been spent.
